

Cognitive Mapping

A cognitive map is a mental picture or image of the layout of the physical environment. We use the things we see as we travel along a familiar route to help guide us around the city.

Examples can be buildings, parks, schools, shops and even people.

Think of a route that you often take and draw a cognitive map, including pictures of the things you see along the way.

